General Notes: "Kegley's Virginia Frontier" page 112

1746: The CALLAWAY brothers, Francis, Richard, Thomas and William, sons of Joseph Callaway of Caroline County, were closely identified with Old Lunenburg and Bedford Counties. It is said that they came to this section in 1740 and were the first men who cleared land and raised corn on the Otter River. They appear in the land records of 1747. Francis Callaway had 224 acres on the lower side of Buffalo Crrek, Richard 244 acres near by. There followed many important surveys in both Albemarle and Lunenburg counties - John Chiswell, 2460 acres on south branch of Rockfish River; Leonard Ballew 2472 acres on south side of Fluvanna (James River); Col. John Henry, 2224 acres on the east side of Tye River; WILLIAM WALTON, 1020 acres on Walton's Fork of Slate River. (etc).

Born in Caroline County, VA, Richard Callaway lived on a farm there in boyhood. He was still quite young when h is parents and his brother, Joseph, died of a fever within six weeks of one another. The family continued thereafter at the home farm until al the children were grown and some of them married, when, in order to have more land for their use, they sold out and moved to the then undeveloped regions of Bedford County, VA.

Laid out the town of New Bedford, KY in 1761

Killed by Indians in Kentucky. Richard died March 8, 1778 in killed by Shaunnes who attacked him and his work crew at the site of his ferry across the Kentucky River. His body was interred March 1778 in Booneborough, Kentucky. According to the French Tipton Paper, Colonel Callaway was buried at the Lisle Cemetery located very near Ft. Boonesborough.

He married two times. He married Frances Walton in Brunswick, Virginia, 1745. Frances was born in Brunswick, Virginia. Frances was the daughter of Robert Walton and Frances Sherwood. Frances died circa 1766 in Bedford County, Virginia. He married the widow of John Hoy, Elizabeth Jones in Bedford, Virginia, 1767. Elizabeth was born in Virginia. Elizabeth was the daughter of Gabriel Jones and (?) Strother. Elizabeth died 1813 in Winchester, Kentucky.

Richard was born as the sixth son of Joseph (Joseph the 2nd or Jr.). His Father, Mother and a brother died shortly thereafter of the "fever". Richard remained with the rest of his family continuing to live in the old homestead, then sold out about 1740 and settled in old Brunswick County (the portion which ultimately became Bedford County) locating on Big Otter River at the eastern base of the Peaks of Otter. When the war broke out in 1754, the country had become considerable populated and the people collected in forts which Washington occasionally visited. Three of the Callaway brothers held the commission of Capitan: Thomas at Hickey's Fort, William at Pig River Fort and Richard at Blackwater Fort. The frontiers were constantly alarmed by marauding parties. for services in these engagements Richard and William were promoted to the rank of Bedford Militia Colonels. (This is from the account given by Lyman Draper in his Draper Manuscripts and is generally accepted by members of the Callaway Family.) Richard Callaway was born June 14, 1717, according to what purports to be the Richard Callaway Bible. Elijah Callaway, in a statement to Lyman Draper (Draper M/S), said that Col. Richard Callaway was born about 1717. Various other dates of his birth can be found in printed and manuscript mater, but the 1717 date seem to be borne out by the first appearance of Richard Callaway in official records.

About 1745, Richard married Frances Walton, daughter of Robert and Frances Walton. As a young man, Richard was appointed Constable of Lunenburg County, Virginia on May 5, 1746 (Lunenburg Co. Court Order bk. 1, page 5). And on August 20, 1747, he patented his first land, 244 acres in Brunswick County, Virginia on the lower side of Buffalo Creek (VA Patent Bk 26, pg 101). This land, he and his wife, Frances, sold to William Callaway on March 8, 1750 (Lunenburg Co. Deed Bk 2, page 55). Also in this year, the Lunenburg tithables list showed that he had acquired a negro named Tony.

When Richard was eighteen years old he settled on Big Otter River, then in Brunswick County, afterwards in Lunenburg and finally in Bedford County, Virginia, at the eastern base of the noted Peaks of Otter. Lunenburg County was taken from Brunswick County in 1746.

Bedford County was cut from Lunenburg County in 1755. The Callaways were the first to clear and cultivate the soil in this section. In 1745, or when twenty-three years old, Richard married Frances Walton of Bedford County, a sister of Thurward Walton, county surveyor who assisted the Callaways in locating land.

In November 1758, he took the oath as Colonel of Militia for Bedford County. Records offer the conclusion that Richard Callaway did actively participate in some capacity during the French and Indian War. Late in the year 1766, soon after the birth of their daughter, Theodosia, Frances Walton Callaway died. Within the next year (1767) Richard married his second wife, Elizabeth Jones Hoy, the widow of John Hoy of Buckingham County, Virginia. She was the Mother of two sons by John Hoy, John Booker Hoy and William Hoy.

Richard Colonel Callaway and Elizabeth Jones had the following children:

11). Keziah Calloway was born in Virginia in 1769. Keziah died on September 26, 1845 at 76 years of age. She married twice. She married James Frence Private. James was born WFT Est. 1764-1784. James died WFT Est. 1788-1854. She married James French in Boonesboro, Kentucky on June 27, 1783. James was born in Virginia in November 1756. James died April 1, 1835 at 78 years of age.

12). Richard Callaway, Jr. was born circa 1753. Richard died circa 1795. He married Margaret Wells in 1790.(619) Margaret was born in Buckingham, Virginia in 1733. Margaret died 1813 at 80 years of age.

13). John Callaway was born August 25, 1775. He married Booker Private. She was born circa 1777. She died circa 1796.

Colonel Richard Callaway, sixth son (or grandson) of the founder, was born in 1722; in Caroline County, Virginia. During the period, 1747-54, he patented lands in Brunswick and Lunenburg Counties and in Bedford County during 1762-70. An officer in the colonial army from the county in 1758, and appointed in 1761, one of the trustees of New Long. Sergeant, lieutenant and major of forces active in the French and Indian Wars. His first wife, whom he married in 1745, was Frances, daughter of Robert and Frances Walton. It has been said she was a daughter of George Walton, a landowner of Bedford County, VA. The Draper MSS states she was a sister of Sherwood Walton, who, according to the register of St. Peters' Parish, New Kent (later Hanover) County, VA was a son of Robert and Frances Walton. Frances (Walton) Calloway died in 1766, and the next year, 1767, Richard Callaway married Mrs. Elizabeth (Jones) Hoy, widow of John Hoy, of Buckingham County, Virginia. He was the father of fifteen (15) children, twelve by his first wife and three by his second wife.

Richard Callaway made several visits with Daniel Boone to Kentucky and moved his family there in 1775 - about September 26th. In the affairs of the infant settlement, he became an efficient actor, his services being numerous and valuable. He assisted in the founding of Boonesborough, was one of the first burgesses to the general assembly of Virginia, justice of the peace and colonel of the county - member of the first legislature, which met a Boonesborough to organize the government of Transylvania, this legislature held its sittings under the shade of a large elm tree, near the walls of the first ferry at Boonesborough. Callaway County, Kentucky is named for him.

When his two daughters and Jemima Boone were captured by the Indians, July 14, 1776, he led a company which pursued the savages. There is a pretty little romanced in connection with this incident, made mention of my Fenimore Cooper in "The last of the Mohicans,:

The following is quoted from Collins "History of Kentucky," Vol II, rather than family tradition:

A Kentucky Romance of 1776: "Late in the afternoon of Sunday, July 14, 1776, Elizabeth Callaway and her sister Fanny, daughter of Col. Richard Callaway, and Jemima Boone, daughter of Col. Daniel Boone, the first named 16 and grown, the others 14 years old - were captured by Indians, while playing in a canoe in the Kentucky River, a short distance below the fort at Boonesborough. Though they screamed with fright, Elizabeth Callaway fought with her paddle, gashing an Indians head to the bone. They were dragged form the canoe and hurried off, they knew not whiter or to what fate. Colonels Boone and Callaway were absent at the time; but soon returned, and at the head of two parties, one on foot, the other on horseback, began the pursuit. With Boone on foot, were Samuel Henderson, Captain Holder, and Flanders Callaway (the lovers of the three girls, in the order named, and who afterwards married them), Major Wm. B. Smith, Col. John Floyd, Bartlett Scarcy, and Catlett Jones - who pressed forward in the direction the Indians had gone, but five miles before dark overtook them. By light, the next morning, and all day Monday, they pushed on rapidly, some 30 miles further, fearful the girls would grow weary of traveling and be put to death by the savages. The pursuers took fresh courage from every new sign of life in the carefully concealed, but as carefully followed trail - for Elizabeth broke twigs off bushes, and when her life was threatened, by upraised tomahawk, for this, tore small pieces of her dress and dropped along the way. She also impressed the print of her shoes, where the ground would allow it - having refused to exchange her shoes and put on moccasins, which the younger girls, in their alarm, submitted to. The Indians compelled them to walk apart, as they did, in the thick cane, and to wade up or down the little branches of water, so as to hide their trail and deceive as to their number.

"On Tuesday morning, the white renewed the chase; and after going about five miles, saw a gentle smoke curling in the air, over where the Indians had kindled a fire to cook some buffalo veal for breakfast. Says Col. Floyd, in a letter written the next Sunday:

"Our Study had been how to get the prisoners, without giving the Indians time to murder them after they discovered us. We saw each other nearly at the same time. Four of us fired and all of us rushed on them - by which they were prevented from carrying anything away except one shot gun without any ammunition. Col. Boone and myself had each a pretty fair shot, as they began to move off. I am well convinced I shot one thru the body. The one he shot dropped his gun; mine had none. The place was covered with thick cane; and being so much elated on recovering the poor little heart-broken girls, we were prevented from making any further search. We sent the Indians off almost naked; some without their moccasins, and none of them with as much as a knife or tomahawk. (Only one of them ever reached home; the others died from wounds or famine.) After the girls came to themselves sufficiently to speak, they told us there were five Indians (four Shawanese and one Cherokee; they spoke good English, and said they should go to the Shawnese towns. The war-club we got was like those I have seen of that nation; and several words of their language, which the girls retained, were known to be Shawnese."

"Another circumstance attending the recapture is preserved. Elizabeth Calloway was dark complexioned, made more so by the fatigue and exposure. She was sitting by the root of a tree, with a red bandanna handkerchief around her, and with the heads of her sister and Jemima Boone reclining in her lap. One of the men mistaking her for one of the Indians, raised the butt of his gun, and was about bringing it down with all his muscular power upon her defenseless head - when his arm was arrested by one who recognized her. No harm was done; but the narrow escape from a most horrible death at the hands of a friend, produced a melancholy sensation never forgotten by the actors.

Like so many other daring spirits of the time, Col. Callaway was killed by the Indians. On March 8, 1780, while he and several companions were engaged about a mile above the settlement in the construction of his ferry boat, they were fired upon by a party of Shawnee Indians. Callaway was killed his scalped. His body was recovered two days later and buried within the old fort or stockade.

In 1777, Col. Charles Gwatkins (sic), son-in-law of Col. Richard Callaway, raised a company of volunteers in the Revolution and was chosen captain. These men he took from Virginia through the Cumberland Gap and the Wilderness Road to Kentucky, to defend the white settlers against the Indians carrying the British flag. George Rogers Clark met this company en route west and he reported them short of provisions. However, they reached their destination without undue hardship. Among the men in this company was Joseph Jackson, of Bedford County, a lifelong friend of Richard Callaway. This Jackson was captured by Indians at the Blue Licks in February 1778, and was taken a prisoner to an Indian village in Ohio, where he remained for some years. While there he was the Indians returning from an expedition. Among the scalps they waved in the air he recognized that of Richard Callaway, which he knew by the length and peculiar gray of the hair.

Colonel Callaway left a widow and children of both marriages, descendants of whom are in Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, and California.

Simon Miller, John Callaway and Charles Gwatkin executors of Richard's will, signed 21 December 1772. Copy produced at Supreme Court District of Kentucky 1st of March 1784.
